The Achieve! series of History titles has been developed for teachers who require modified, curriculum-focused activities for secondary school students who struggle to read and comprehend regular classroom materials because of poor literacy skills. Many of the pages will also be suitable as supplementary material for regular classes.

Making a nation – Australia 1750–1918 explores ideas about the experiences of our Indigenous populations since the late 1700s, including how European colonists and Indigenous Australian peoples interacted with the land and how historians can hold conflicting views about history. Major moments in the nation's development are included, such as the Eureka Rebellion, Federation and times of increased non-European migration. Students are also provided with a scaffolded activity that will assist them to prepare an essay about the Australian identity.

The CD-ROM contains all the pages that are featured in the book, as well as a file of illustrations that can be used for other work sheets. These documents can be easily edited to suit the individual needs of students.

This book is divided into ten units, containing photocopiable Resource sheets and Activity sheets. This will allow teachers to use the material in a variety of ways. For example, the unit could be taught as a lesson with students in groups of varying sizes. Alternatively, a single Resource sheet and related Activity sheets can be used as support material, for individual homework, assessment or revision.

The teacher's notes provide valuable guidance about using each unit, and contain the following elements.

- Objectives – These are the key skills and knowledge learnt through using the work sheets.

Prior knowledge – This refers to the skills and knowledge required for students to complete the tasks. Some activities are more challenging than others, however, as a rule, students should have a reading comprehension age of six to nine years to be able to attempt the activities.

Background – This section provides additional guidance to help teachers to present a successful lesson. It may include definitions or further background notes about the subject matter.
- Starter activity – Warm-up activities are provided to put the content into proper context and to gain student interest and attention.

Resource and Activity work sheets – The Resource sheets do not always contain activities and are used either to stimulate discussion or as a part of the unit's activities. The Activity sheets may be used sequentially or as stand-alone tasks, depending on the needs of the students.

Extension ideas – Additional tasks are suggested to recap the main skills or knowledge taught in the lesson, or to extend, assess or include technology in the lesson.

Objectives

- Learn about the Australian landscape
- Consider how European colonists and Indigenous Australian peoples interacted with the land
- Identify key events that shaped the development of Australia

Prior knowledge

Students need no prior knowledge for this unit.

Background

Australia was settled by Indigenous Australian people 40,000–60,000 years ago. They established effective processes of hunting and gathering that rarely left them without food. Europeans are descended from people in the Fertile Crescent in Iran and Iraq, approximately 10,000 years ago. They focused on agricultural practices, which meant they alternated between famine and plenty.

The British often saw Indigenous Australian people as barbaric and ignorant, believing their own society was a superior civilisation. Their racist attitudes made it easy to decide that land without familiar rows of houses, cities and farms was 'empty'. They declared Australia terra nullius (empty land) and felt fully justified in invading and colonising Australia. The racist attitudes of the British also led them to assume that Indigenous Australian people were one homogenous group. In reality there were at least 250–300 groups who spoke numerous languages (300–700 distinct languages). This misunderstanding led to significant social problems that persist today.

The first British people who came to Australia did so under duress, as soldier guards and unwilling convicts, transported to create a penal colony. Moving to Australia was so unthinkable that many convicts did whatever they could to get out of it. However, Australia quickly moved from being a penal colony for criminals to a place of opportunity for settlers who were willing to work hard. Many settlers moved to Australia to grow crops or raise sheep and cattle. They wanted to make a land for themselves; something they couldn't do in their home country.

Starter activity

With the class, brainstorm ideas about what Australia was like in the year 1788. This is an opportunity to test pre-knowledge of the topic. Ask questions such as:

- Who were the first British people to come to Australia? Why did they come here?
- What was life like for Indigenous Australian people before European settlement in 1788?
- How did Indigenous Australian people use the land?
- How did British settlers use the land?

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'Map of Australia', asks students to use maps as a focus for considering Australia from the perspectives of two groups: Indigenous Australian people and the first British settlers.

The Activity sheet, 'Indigenous Australians and their land', extends the previous task by considering how Indigenous Australian peoples managed the land and comparing this to the traditional British use of land.

The Activity sheet, 'Timeline of Australia', identifies some key events from 1788 to 1918. Students are asked to show these events on a timeline, and then research three more key events from this time.

On the Activity sheet, 'Homes in New South Wales', students annotate primary source images to compare the temporary homes of Indigenous Australian people with the more permanent homes in the towns of British settlers.

The Activity sheet, 'Penal colony or pastoral settlement', looks at the changing use of land by the British in Australia.

Extension ideas

- Have students explore the interactive map of Aboriginal languages at:
<http://www.abc.net.au/indigenous/map/>
- Students could use the above website to choose one language or group to research. Ask them to find out about the place this group lived, how they lived and their cultural practices and beliefs.

Web addresses were functional at the time of publication but teachers should check them for inappropriate content and to ensure that they are still functional before use with students.

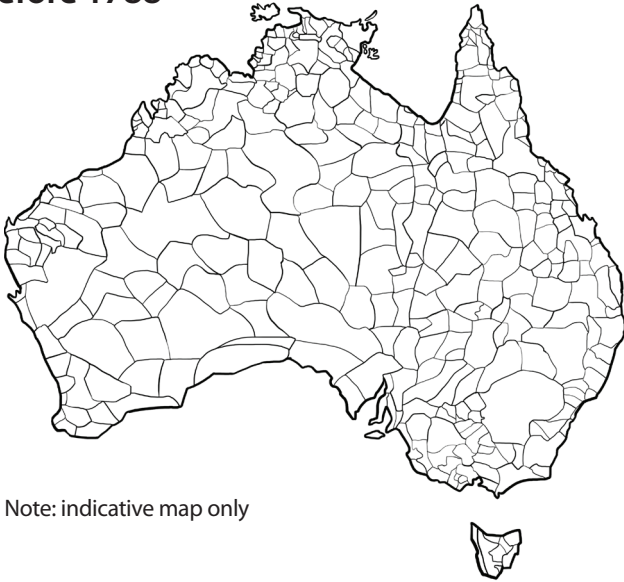

Map of Australia

It is easy to think that Australia has always been organised into six states – Victoria, New South Wales, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia and Tasmania – and two mainland territories – Northern Territory and Australian Capital Territory. However, these divisions have only existed for about 100 years. By looking at older maps, we can see that the way Australia is organised has changed, depending on the time and the people.

-  1 List two similarities and two differences for the maps below.
Hint: Look for things like size, shape, names, time and understanding of Australia.

Similarities
Differences

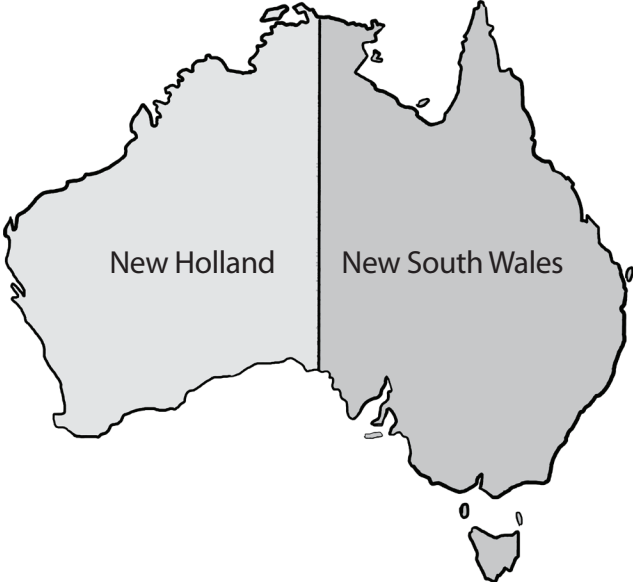

Indigenous Australian language groups, before 1788

Note: indicative map only

Each section represents a different Indigenous Australian group. Each group spoke a unique language and had distinctive cultural practices.

Australia, 1788

Australia was divided into two areas: New South Wales claimed by Britain and New Holland claimed by the Netherlands.

2 What do these two maps tell you about Australia in 1788?

Indigenous Australians and their land

Terra nullius is a Latin term that means ‘empty land’. The British used terra nullius as a legal excuse for invading Australia. Because Indigenous Australian peoples were not settling and farming the land in the same ways that Europeans did, the British simply took over by settling first in Sydney Cove and, later, in other parts of Australia.

-  1 Complete these sentences.
- a Terra nullius means _____
- b British settlers used this term because _____

It is hard to know exactly how many Indigenous people lived in Australia before 1788 because they didn’t keep written records of their populations, and many died after colonisation. Some historians believe there were 750,000 Indigenous Australians speaking 300–700 languages. In many ways, Indigenous Australia was like a continent of many countries, not just one country.

- 2 How many Indigenous Australians were there before 1788? _____
- 3 How many different Indigenous Australian languages were there? _____
- 4 What do you think life in Australia was like before European settlement?
- _____
- _____

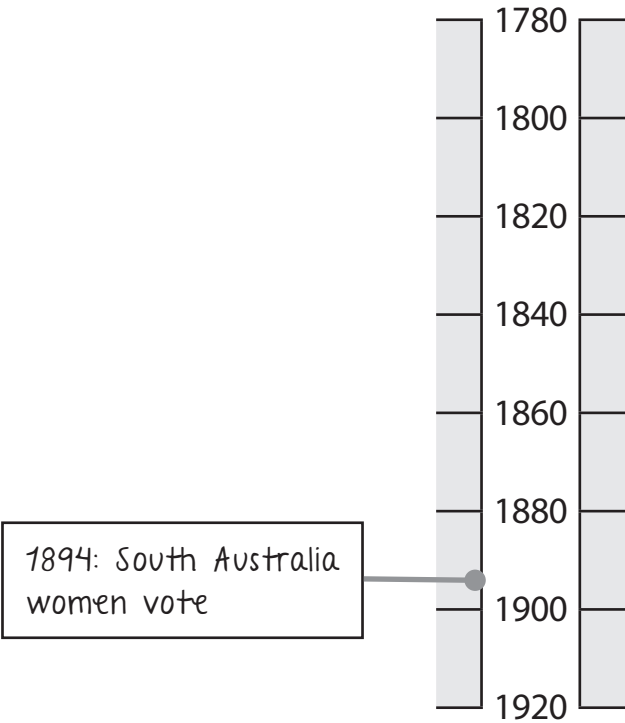

Indigenous Australians didn’t produce food in the ways that Europeans were used to. Groups hunted and gathered food or trapped animals using techniques such as ‘fire-stick farming’. This involved setting fire to areas so kangaroos could use the land for grazing and travelling. Hunters used sophisticated tools and trapping techniques to gather the meat they needed. Some groups used techniques that Europeans recognise as agriculture. The Wiradjuri in New South Wales collected the grains of millet grasses to make bread, and the Gunditjmara in Victoria built a series of canals and fences to farm eels.

- 5 What farming techniques have Indigenous Australian people used?
- _____
- _____

Timeline of Australia

 Write each event in the correct place on the timeline.
Use the underlined keywords for your labels. One has been done for you.

1788: The First Fleet lands at Botany Bay in what is now New South Wales. 1838: There is a massacre of Indigenous Australians at Myall Creek, resulting in the first trial of British men for killing Indigenous Australians. 1894: South Australia becomes the first Australian colony to allow women to vote. 1901: Australia becomes a Federation.	1901: The Immigration Restriction Act is passed, restricting non-white immigration. 1907: The minimum wage that men could be paid is decided in the Harvester Judgement court case. 1854: Miners rebel at Eureka Stockade, fighting for better rights. 1914–1918: Australia enters World War I on the side of the British.

Extra activity: Use your textbook or the internet to find three more key events in the development of the Australian nation. Add them to your timeline. For example: James Cook’s discovery of Australia, first cricket or football match, first Melbourne Cup, choosing Canberra as the capital city, start of the gold rush or the opening of Sydney Harbour Bridge.

Homes in New South Wales

-  1 Label each type of housing to show:
- who lives there
 - how many people can fit
 - advantages
 - construction style
 - materials used
 - disadvantages.

Thomas Medland, View of a hut in New South Wales, 1789, National Library of Australia, nla.obj-135910348.

GW Evans, Sydney from the western side of the cove, 1803, State Library of New South Wales, XV1/1803/1.

- 2 Which type of housing best suits its environment? Why?

Penal colony or pastoral settlement

Britain colonised Australia to use it as a place for British criminals to serve their sentences. Over time, European settlers saw the possibilities in growing crops and raising stock. These first settlements were often called pastoral settlements because most had sheep and cattle.

Pastoral means using land for the grazing of sheep and cows.

New South Wales was the first area settled. Originally this colony covered half of Australia. The other half was called New Holland. Over time, these colonies became the states and territories we know today: Victoria, New South Wales, Western Australia, South Australia, Tasmania, Queensland and Northern Territory.

State or Territory	Penal colony	Founded as a colony	Ruled by
New South Wales	1788	1823	NSW
Tasmania (called Van Diemen’s Land before 1856)	1803	1825	TAS
Western Australia (called New Holland originally)	1849	1827	WA
Victoria	----	1835	NSW until 1851
Queensland	1824	1824	NSW until 1859
South Australia	----	1836	SA
Northern Territory	----	1823	NSW until 1863, SA until 1911

 Copy these sentence starters into your workbook and complete them.

- 1 Australia was settled as a penal colony, but early settlers also used it for _____
- 2 The first colony was _____
- 3 The two states and one territory that were never penal colonies are _____
- 4 The state of _____ became a penal colony after it was a colony for settlers. I think this was because _____ (Hint: Think about the location and features of the state.)
- 5 The state that ruled over Victoria for at least 15 years is _____
- 6 The states that ruled over the Northern Territory are _____

Objectives

- Learn about the experiences of the Indigenous peoples of Australia
- Consider how European colonists and Indigenous peoples interacted
- Identify key events that impacted on the development of Australia such as the Stolen Generations and the settlement at Coranderrk

Prior knowledge

Students need a basic understanding of the settlement of Australia.

Background

The treatment of Indigenous Australian people by the European settlers was often problematic. It was rare that the two groups made treaties. The treaty John Batman made in Victoria in 1835 with the Wurundjeri Elders may be the only one of its kind in Australia.

The settlers' permanent usage of land destroyed the semi-nomadic lifestyles of the Indigenous Australian peoples. Settlement in Victoria was quicker than in other states as the land was so flat, unlike New South Wales with the mountains beyond Sydney, or South Australia with the swamps around Adelaide. Indigenous Australian peoples struggled to survive after their lands were taken away. They suffered from the introduction of diseases like influenza and smallpox and the massacres, violence and sexual attacks from settlers.

In some areas Indigenous Australian people fought back, like the Wiradjuri in the Blue Mountains. In other places like Coranderrk, an Aboriginal Reserve in Victoria, Indigenous Australians responded by following European methods of dispute resolution: petitions, deputations and court hearings.

The European settlers often had negative views about the Indigenous Australian peoples, seeing them initially as 'vermin', and later as a 'dying race'. Some people felt that 'half-caste'* children (children of both Indigenous Australian and European parentage) should be removed from their homes and raised in reserves and missions. Often this was done by religious or charity groups. The intention was to assimilate these children into the white community. Members of these Stolen Generations often experienced physical and sexual abuse and treatment as second class citizens, as well as the loss of family and culture.

* Make sure students understand that 'half-caste' is a historical term and very much outdated in usage. Today, it is highly offensive, especially to Indigenous Australian peoples. It is linked to the historical belief that people of different racial groups should not marry nor have children.

Starter activity

Ask the students to work in small groups to make a Venn diagram comparing:

- Indigenous Australian life before settlement (1700s)
- Indigenous Australian life in the first years of European settlement (1800s–1850s).

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'The treatment of Indigenous Australians', explores the conflict between the Wiradjuri people and Europeans in New South Wales. This concept is further explored in the Activity sheet, 'Coranderrk', which outlines issues between settlers and the Wurundjeri people in Victoria.

The Activity sheet, 'History wars', provides an overview of two key issues historians have with Indigenous Australian history: the validity of oral history and focusing on positive or negative events.

The Resource sheet, 'Stolen Generations', gives information about the Stolen Generations through speech bubbles. People with a first and last name are real people, with text referring to their lives. People with initials as surnames are fictionalised characters whose dialogue is based on historical facts.

It is paired with the Activity sheet, 'Perspectives on the Stolen Generations', where students consider the views and aims of different groups.

Extension ideas

Have students further research Coranderrk and the difficulties faced in the first fights for Indigenous Australian civil rights. Useful websites:

<http://ergo.slv.vic.gov.au/explore-history/fight-rights/indigenous-rights/coranderrk-mission>

<http://coranderrk.com/>

<http://www.minutesofevidence.com.au/the-coranderrk-story/>

Web addresses were functional at the time of publication but teachers should check them for inappropriate content and to ensure that they are still functional before use with students.

The treatment of Indigenous Australians

 1 Cross out the incorrect word in each set of brackets.

In the Blue Mountains in New South Wales, settlers (was / were) originally treated well by the Indigenous people. But (this / they) changed as more settlers arrived. The Europeans settled the land by cutting down trees, putting up fences and (built / building) houses.

Many Indigenous Australian peoples were nomadic, which meant they (stayed / moved) from place to place. However, (their / they're) travel was not random – they regularly returned to locations for specific foods, water, hunting and sacred duties. The European settlements (helped / stopped) Indigenous people from using the land the way they had for thousands of years.

The warriors of the Wiradjuri in the Blue Mountains (fought / liked) the Europeans. They killed livestock and destroyed buildings in an effort to make the settlers (leaf / leave). The Wiradjuri leader Windradyne was captured in 1824, and the Wiradjuri attacks (slowed / slowing) until he was released a month later.

2 Use the information above to complete the questions.

What did the European settlers want? _____ What did the Europeans do? _____ _____ Why do you think they did that? _____ _____	What did the Wiradjuri want? _____ What did the Wiradjuri do? _____ _____ Why do you think they did that? _____ _____
---	---

In August 1824, Governor Thomas Brisbane declared martial law. This meant that Europeans could shoot Wiradjuri people without being punished for it. It is believed that 100 Wiradjuri were killed during this time. In December 1824, Windradyne and Thomas Brisbane organised peace between the peoples.

3 Sometimes to fix a bad situation people have to make difficult choices. How do you think Governor Brisbane and Windradyne agreed to make peace? What compromises could they have made? Discuss your ideas with a friend then write them in your workbook.

Coranderrk

 1 Use the word banks to complete the information.

Victoria

Europeans begin to settle in _____ in 1835. At the time, there were around _____ Indigenous Australian people in Victoria. History wars

 1 Historians can hold conflicting views about history. Read these two views of history that some Australian historians have held and then complete the table.

Views of history
Black Armband view of history Focuses on the mistreatment and prejudice in Australia, and the negative elements of settlement: massacres, abuse and death.	Three Cheers view of history Focuses on the achievements, values and successes in Australia; all became perfect when the penal colonies were closed.
Is this view helpful for understanding the past? Explain.	Is this view helpful for understanding the past? Explain.

Keith Windschuttle and Bain Attwood are historians who have written about Indigenous Australian history. Here are their views on oral history.

Historian views on oral history
Keith Windschuttle: Oral histories can't be trusted if they are recorded years after the event. Historians can lie about oral testimony and statistics to help prove their point.	Bain Attwood: When there is no historical material, oral history can be important. You can't say an event didn't occur just because there is no written evidence.

2 Do these historians value oral history? Why? _____

3 How do you think these historians' views affect the way that Indigenous Australian history is studied?

Stolen Generations

My mum didn't want them to take me, but she didn't have a choice. The Aboriginal Board sent police for me and I couldn't ever go home again. I have to go to school and I get hit if I don't speak English. Some of them have done bad things to me. But nobody listens to an Aboriginal girl.

Ada Injie, 1930s

The Native Welfare lady came by our camp. I saw her looking at my daughter Joyce. I told Joyce, 'You'll have to run or they'll catch you up. And if they grab you they'll never let you go.' I was lucky. She ran and ran. And when the Native Welfare lady left, we moved to a different station. Later I heard that lady came back and took two other kids from our camp.

Nugi, who was renamed 'Martha S.', 1930s

Maka, who was renamed 'Edward L.', 1870s

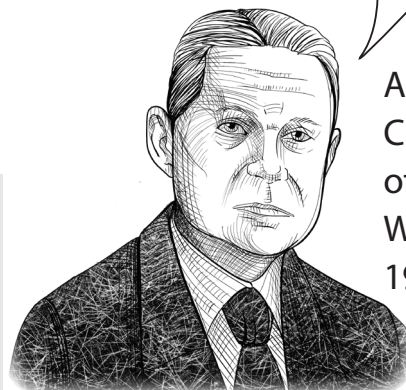

I was taken from my mum to live in a dormitory on the mission. The older kids used to tell me stories of when this country was our land but I try not to think about it. I mean, I'm thirteen - I'll be working next year.

To leave half-caste* Aboriginal children with their parents is not good for them or their parents. It is only by removing children from the parents and taking them to missions that we can uplift the Native race.

I believe that their new situation in the missions is far more satisfactory than the living conditions that they resided in before and no-one can convince me that I am wrong in this matter.

Full-blooded* Aborigines will surely become extinct soon and if we don't help the half-castes*, the same thing will happen to them.

Auber Neville, Chief Protector of Aborigines in Western Australia, 1930s

* The terms 'half-caste' and 'full-blooded' were once commonly used. Today, they are highly offensive, especially to Indigenous Australian peoples. These terms are linked to the historical belief that people of different racial groups should not marry nor have children – a racist idea that is considered completely unacceptable in today's society.

Perspectives on the Stolen Generations

 Use the Resource sheet, ‘Stolen Generations’, to help you complete the table.

Groups	What did they feel or think about ‘half-caste’* children?	What was their agenda? Hint: ‘Agenda’ means the reasons for their actions.

Objectives

- Learn about the experiences of the people on the goldfields
- Consider the impact of the Eureka Rebellion on the Australian nation
- Discover how the gold rush led to the development of 'Marvellous Melbourne'.

Prior knowledge

Students need a basic understanding of the settlement of Australia.

Background

The gold rush in Australia started in 1851, only three years after the Californian gold rush in 1848. The mid-1800s was a period of great movement as people migrated first to America and later to Australia in the hope of finding gold. This had a large impact on Australia, especially in Victoria as the two main goldfields in the 1850s were Bendigo and Ballarat. These population changes contributed to the:

- construction of the Australian national identity as a 'working man's paradise' where poor men and their families could live a reasonable life
- expansion of the city of Melbourne into 'Marvellous Melbourne', allowing it to compete with European cities for size and grandeur
- development of racialised policies in the newly federated Australia – the Immigration Restriction Act.

Living on the goldfields was difficult. Miners often struggled to buy food and mining gear, the possibility of finding gold was limited and the fee for the mining licence at 30 shillings a month (£18 a year) to rent an area approximately 3.6 metres square was exorbitant. Facilities were initially limited in the gold mining region, with sanitation and housing only slowly following the boom. Some miners brought their families. So while the goldfields were full of men, there were also women and children.

Due to the difficulties of life on the goldfields, many became disillusioned and changed occupations. The demand for labour in Australia meant that many people were paid well and could afford items that were seen as luxuries for the lower classes in other countries, such as meat for every night's meal.

The goldfields also proved to be a useful landscape for developing political thought. The Eureka Rebellion was held on the goldfields of Ballarat as miners sought political representation in the government.

The goldfields were also a place of disturbing acts of racism, particularly against Chinese miners. There were riots and attacks at a number of goldfields. In the Lambing Flat riots in New South Wales, many of the 200 Chinese miners were savagely beaten. Xenophobic actions and attitudes led to restrictions in Chinese immigration in the different colonies. These attitudes were later expressed in federal law with the Immigration Restriction Act of 1901.

Starter activity

Many students will have prior knowledge of the gold rush from primary school studies. Work with the class to create a mind map of what they already know about the Australian gold rush. This can help you to identify the extent of their knowledge and correct any misconceptions about the time period.

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'Immigration in the gold rushes', asks students to answer questions about a timeline and a graph.

On the Activity sheet, 'Life on the goldfields', students examine a primary source image to find out about how people lived and worked in the goldfields.

The Activity sheet, 'Eureka Rebellion', introduces key information about this event, and students complete comprehension tasks.

The Activity sheet, 'Women of Eureka', provides primary sources that students respond to by writing a first person account of life during Eureka.

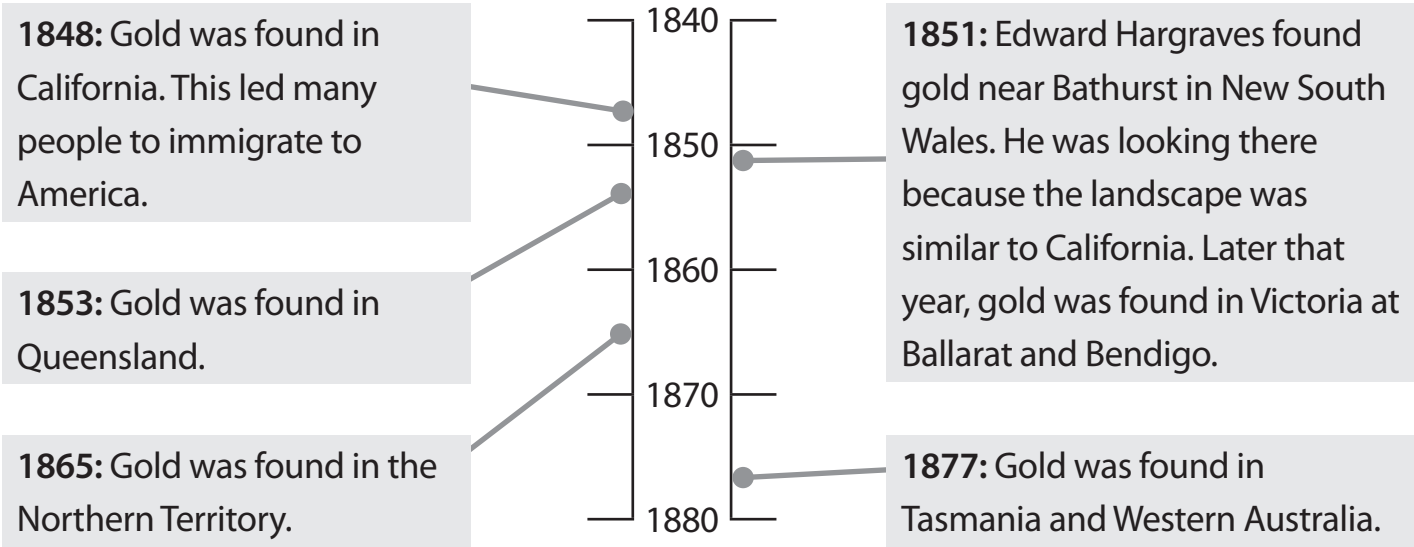

The Activity sheet, 'Marvellous Melbourne', explores how the city developed with a focus on sanitation.

Extension ideas

Have students create a poster for the Eureka Rebellion. They should use powerful images, symbols and clever colour choices to show the ideas and events of the Eureka Rebellion. Ask students to annotate their work to explain the reasons for their design choices.

Immigration in the gold rushes

Timeline of gold discovery in Australia

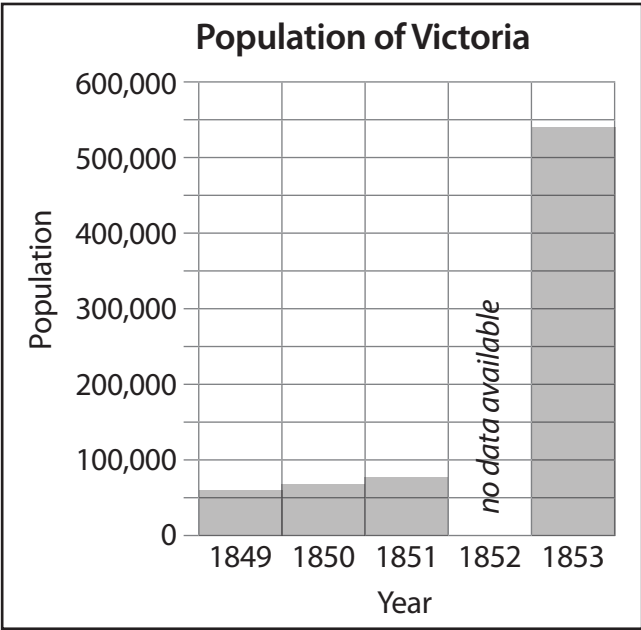

Complete the following questions in your workbook.

- 1 Why was Edward Hargraves looking for gold in New South Wales?
- 2 Gold was found in New South Wales in 1851. How many years later was it found in Western Australia?

The Australian population changed quickly as a result of the gold rush in the 1850s. Most immigrants were from Britain, but many came from China and from other countries in Europe. The population explosion had the biggest impact in Victoria where the Bendigo and Ballarat goldfields attracted many miners.

3 Use the graph to complete this table.

Year	Population
1849
1850
1851
1852
1853

- 4 Describe the change in Victoria’s population over time. Make sure you include numbers in your answer.
- 5 How would this change affect the housing situation?
- 6 How might Indigenous people be affected by this change?

Life on the goldfields

👉 Use this illustration to answer the following questions.

Thomas Ham (engraver), William Strutt (artist), Gold diggings of Victoria, preparing to start, 1854, State Library of Victoria, H2910.

- 1 What equipment are they bringing to the goldfield? _____
- 2 Why would this equipment be useful on the goldfields? _____
- 3 What animals are they taking? _____
- 4 Why would these animals be useful on the goldfields? _____
- 5 What else does the illustration tell you about life on the goldfields? Complete the table.

What are the diggers taking?	How will this help on the goldfields?
A cradle
	To break up the soil and dig holes
Dogs
	To pull carts that carry their equipment

- 6 With a partner, discuss which groups of people are absent from this image. Suggest why.

Eureka Rebellion

 Copy and complete the sentences in the right column in your workbook.

The Government of Victoria did not want to encourage gold miners, so they charged 30 shillings a month for a mining licence for an area 3.6 m square (equivalent to about $1600 in today’s value). The miners could not keep the land they worked and could be moved by the Gold Commission's police force at any time, even if they were up to date with their mining licence.	1 I think it is fair/unfair that the miners could have their land taken from them at any time because ____
Sir Charles Hotham was appointed Governor of Victoria in 1854. He made the Gold Commission's police force check licences twice a week to make sure miners were paying their fees. Many miners had stopped paying because they were too expensive.	2 Governor Hotham viewed the miners ____ 3 The miners viewed the actions of Governor Hotham as ____
Miners were unhappy about the way they were treated. On 30 November 1854, the Eureka Stockade was set up in Ballarat. Peter Lalor was elected as the leader of 500 mining rebels. They wanted three changes: • the release of three diggers taken by the police • no more mining licences • the right for all men to vote.	4 Because the miners were unhappy, they ____ 5 The three things the miners demanded were ____
On 3 December 1854, miners and police clashed at the Eureka Stockade: 28 men were killed and 125 people were taken prisoner. Most of these were miners, but five police were killed. Afterwards, there was a Royal Commission into the treatment of miners. They: • removed licence fees and instead taxed gold • gave miners the right to own land. Later, all men were given the right to vote.	6 In summary, the causes of the Eureka Stockade were ____ 7 The effects of the Eureka Stockade were ____ 8 The outcomes of the Eureka Stockade were ____

Women of Eureka

The Eureka Stockade was held in Ballarat in 1854 as a rebellion against the government. Many histories seem to suggest that only men lived on the goldfields and were part of the Eureka Rebellion. But women also risked their lives on the goldfields and were clearly involved in the rebellion. Anastasia Withers and Anne Duke helped to sew the distinctive Southern Cross flag, the symbol of the Eureka Rebellion.

The g__ld r__sh had an impact on many parts of A__stralian life, but was perhaps most strongly connected to the devel__pment of Melb__urne. Melbourne was founded in 1835, only 16 ye__rs before the gold rush. At first it was a town of scattered build__ngs and settlements with houses built as quickly and cheaply as poss__ble. As gold was found in nearby Bendigo and Ballarat in the 1850s, Melbourne exp__nded to fit the new imm__grants coming to Australia in search of fortune.

By the 1880s, the newly wealthy st__te of Vict__ria could afford many large and be__utiful buildings. Visit__rs to Melbourne were am__zed at how big and exc__ting the town was. It was often referred to as ‘Marv__llous Melbourne’ because it looked bigger and new__r than many of the capital cit__es in Europe.

Somet__mes Melbourne was called ‘Smellbourne’. The city had grown q__ickly, and facilities could not ke__p up with the needs of the incr__asing population. Objectives

- Learn about the immigration of non-Europeans
- Consider the racist treatment of different groups and the beliefs and values this treatment reflected
- Discover contributions of non-European immigrants to the formation of Australia

Prior knowledge

Students need a basic understanding of the settlement of Australia.

Background

The establishment of Australia as a country is usually strongly linked to British and European immigration. However, the image of early Australia as primarily a place of white migrants is in many ways a misunderstanding. Although immigration was largely made up of Europeans, the impact and contributions of immigrants from many non-European backgrounds should not be forgotten.

People from many different nations saw Australia as a land of possibility. It was a place where they could get jobs, find husbands or wives, try life in a new land and perhaps find gold. Some people from non-European backgrounds, such as the Kanakas from the Pacific Islands, were lied to, tricked and/or kidnapped to get them to Australia to work on the sugar cane fields. Others, such as the 'Afghan' cameleers, came willingly to work with the camels that suited this wild and dry land. Both groups were often treated with racism by European immigrants. The Chinese immigrants mainly came for the gold rush and were also mistreated and persecuted for being of a different race.

In 1901 when Australia became one Federated country, the new government introduced the Immigration Restriction Act. This reduced non-European immigration by using techniques such as dictation tests in order to limit who could come to Australia. This created the white Australia of the 1900s which only began diminishing after the 1940s, before being dismantled in the 1970s.

Starter activity

Work with the class to brainstorm a list of countries from which people emigrated to Australia in the 1800s. If students do not mention Afghanistan, China and the Pacific Islands, suggest them yourself. Ask questions such as: Why would people move to a faraway country where they do not speak the language or know the culture?

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'Chinese immigration', discusses the reasons why Chinese immigrants first moved to Australia, how they were treated and what contributions they made to Australian society.

On the Resource sheet, 'Mongolian Octopus', a primary source image is used to explore the negative stereotypes of Chinese people in the 1880s.

Using the Activity sheet, 'Racism in Australia', students plan and write a short source analysis of the image on the Resource sheet, 'Mongolian Octopus'.

The Activity sheet, 'Afghans in Australia', asks student to fill in the missing words to complete information about the contributions of the Afghan cameleers.

The Activity sheet, 'Blackbirding', explores the practice of bringing Pacific Islanders to Australia to work as indentured labour on the Queensland sugar cane plantations.

Extension ideas

Have students research someone from their family tree. They could find out:

- why this person came to Australia
- what made them want to leave their former country
- what made them choose Australia.

Then ask students to compare these experiences to those of the early Chinese, Afghan or Pacific Islander migrants.

Chinese immigration

 Copy and complete the sentences in the right column in your workbook.

The first Chinese migrants to Australia were sailors who left their ships and became cheap labourers. However, large numbers of Chinese immigrants came for the gold rush in the 1850s. They called Australia ‘New Gold Mountain’. Most of these immigrants planned to stay long enough to make their fortunes and then go home.	1 Most Chinese immigrants came to Australia because ____.
Most gold rush migrants went to country towns like Ballarat and Bendigo. The Chinese miners sometimes created secret groups to establish rules and punish rule-breakers. This allowed them to maintain a good reputation and keep safe.	2 Chinese miners created secret societies because ____.
There was a lot of racism in early Australia and many Chinese people were treated badly. In the 1850s, Victoria and South Australia put restrictions on the number of Chinese who could enter the colony.	3 Events in the 1800s that showed racist attitudes include ____.
In 1861, there were riots at the Lambing Flat gold mines in New South Wales. European miners attacked the Chinese camps. Most Chinese miners lost all their belongings. Many were severely injured and some had their pigtails cut off. European miners had always treated Chinese miners badly, but the size, planning and violence of this attack was something new.	4 Lambing Flat was important because ____.
In 1901 there were 29,000 Chinese people living in Australia. This was the year of Federation, when the six colonies became one country. One of the first Acts of the new Australian Government was the Immigration Restriction Act of 1901. This law was used to restrict non-European immigration and this continued until the 1970s.	5 Three examples of racism in our society today are ____.

Mongolian Octopus

This cartoon was created as a racist reaction to Chinese migrants, described here as Mongolian. It shows the fears held about Chinese migration during this time.

Phil May, 'The Mongolian Octopus – His Grip on Australia', The Bulletin, 21 August 1886, State Library of New South Wales, MDQ079/39.

Chinese stereotype	Negative views this showed about Chinese	What Australians were taught to value in the 1880s
Cheap labour (worked for less money)	Paid less = worth less	Work for fair wages and a fair go for white men.
Pak Ah-Pu and Fan Tan (Chinese lottery game and a gambling game)	Cheats who tricked people into losing lots of money	Games are good, but being cheated is bad.
Immorality (had bad moral values)	Could not be trusted, not good citizens	Prostitution and mixed marriages are bad.
Smallpox and typhoid (contagious diseases)	Dirty and diseased, passing on illness	Healthy people are the ideal, avoid sick people.
Opium (addictive drug)	Mysterious drug addicts	Alcohol is a good, manly drink; opium is odd and weak.
Bribery (paying to get special benefits)	Cheating to get better treatment	A fair go for white men. All equal here.
Customs robbery (lying to officials about money)	Stealing money from Australia to send to China	Money made in Australia belongs in Australia.

Racism in Australia

 Use the Resource sheet, 'Mongolian Octopus', to complete the source analysis below. It is based on the CHIPS structure. Discuss each question with a partner and write your own answer in your workbook.

1 Caption

- a The text at the left of the image is the caption. What does it tell you?
- b How does the caption help us understand the image? For example, Mongolian Octopus: the word Mongolian was often used to describe all Asian people and could be seen as an insult.

2 Historical connections

- a When was this image created?
- b What events and issues were happening in this time?
- c How does the image connect to the time period?

3 Interrogate the image

- a What stands out in the image? Why?
- b What is unusual about this image?
- c What is absent that should be shown? What is present that shouldn't be? For example, it is rare to see pictures of white and black students together in schools before the 1950s in America because of segregation. So a photo showing black and white students together would be important.

4 People

- a Who is in the image? Why?
- b Are these figures represented positively or negatively? How can you tell? Why are they presented that way?

5 Signs and Symbols

- a What symbols are used? For example, a flag represents a country. An octopus represents something greedy and grasping.
- b What are these symbols being used to say?

Extra activity: Use the completed table and the Resource sheet, 'Mongolian Octopus', to write your own paragraph responding to the image.

Afghans in Australia

 Use the word banks to complete the information.

Word bank: alternative, 'Afghans', Australia, explore, import, recruit, water

In the early 1800s, many people wanted to _____ the inland areas of Australia. However, horses and mules could not carry enough _____ for these expeditions. Camels were suggested as an _____, but few Europeans knew how to look after them. They needed to _____ camels and _____ people to look after them.

_____ refers to people from Afghanistan. In the 1800s in _____, Afghan was also used to refer to people from Egypt, Persia, Turkey and India.

Word bank: cameleers, Carpentaria, desert, expeditions, Melbourne, railway, remote

In 1860, the first Afghan _____ joined Burke and Wills' team to explore inland Australia. They set out from _____ in Victoria and travelled up through Australia until they reached the Gulf of _____ in Queensland. There were three Afghans to manage the 24 camels. The expedition was not successful, but the use of camels became widespread because they were so well-suited to _____ travel.

Later, Afghan cameleers went on _____ to discover new places and set up telegraph systems and _____ tracks in _____ areas.

Word bank: decades, married, Muslim, non-white, Restriction, settlers, wild

The Afghans who came to Australia as cameleers were usually single, male and _____. Often they were not treated well because European _____ were racist towards _____ immigrants. Usually, Afghans lived in a separate part of town and only _____ Indigenous Australians because they were the only women who would accept them as husbands.

Many Afghans were forced to return to their home countries after the Immigration _____ Act in 1901, even if they had lived in Australia for _____. Their camels were usually left in the desert to look after themselves. Today there are still _____ tribes of camels in the centre of Australia.

Blackbirding

In Queensland, many of the first settlers started up large farms called plantations. Most grew sugar cane. These plantations were so large that the settlers could not harvest all the sugar cane by themselves, so they brought people from the Pacific Islands to work as cheap labour.

‘Blackbirding’ was the term for ‘convincing’ Pacific Islanders to come to Australia. Over 60,000 people were ‘blackbirded’ during the 1800s.

Pacific Islanders were often:

- kidnapped or tricked into going to Queensland
- lied to about how much money they would earn
- called ‘Kanakas’, a negative term
- paid very little
- given three year contracts they could not escape
- made to work very long hours in harsh conditions.

I was the founder of Townsville in Queensland, and one of the first shipowners to bring Pacific Islanders to Australia to work in the sugar fields. They make good workers and I get to make good money. Black people are better workers than white people - they can deal better with the heat.

Robert Towns, 1840s

 1 Use the information above to write a diary entry about your life as a ‘sugar slave’.

2 Imagine that you are a Queensland plantation owner.
Explain why you need ‘Kanaka’ labour.

3 How else could the plantation owners solve their labour problem?

Objectives

- Learn about key features of life in Australia in the 1900s
- Consider this key moment in time as Australia moved from separate colonies to become a Federation
- Compose a fictional piece that shows an understanding of this historical period

Prior knowledge

A basic knowledge of Federation may be useful.

Background

By the 1900s, Australia had started to define itself as a nation. It had moved quickly from an isolated wilderness where convicts were transported to a relatively modern civilisation by the 1900s. The discovery of gold in places like Ballarat, Bendigo and Castlemaine led to a huge influx of migrants from a wide range of countries. This began to shape Australia into the multicultural nation it is today.

People began viewing Australia as being at the forefront of egalitarianism and equality. However, in many ways this perception was simply a veneer that hid the reality: people in Australia were not equal. There was a vast gulf between the rich and the poor, sexism was rife, and those in the country had a much more basic existence than those in the cities.

Australian society in 1900 was on the verge of massive change. New technology led to improvements in housing, sanitation and working conditions. The separate colonies were to become one country with Federation in 1901. Women fought to be heard, forming suffragette groups to argue for the female vote to be part of Federation. Education gradually moved from the province of the wealthy and middle class to being available to all: free, secular and compulsory.

Starter activity

Ask students to guess what life was like for people in Australia in 1900. Compile a class list, focusing on areas such as housing, transport, work, education and recreation. As they progress through the unit, update the list to reflect what they learn.

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'Sanitation and health', guides students through a comparison of the experiences of the poor and the rich. It also identifies sanitation developments in the 1900s.

With the Activity sheet, 'Homes', students compare and contrast their own homes with those of the working class living in worker's cottages. This activity could be extended in class by using masking tape to mark out the floor plan of the worker's cottage. This would provide students with a stronger understanding of the similarities and differences in housing today.

The Resource sheet, 'Working class men, women and children', explores the difficulties in the lives of the working class. Students use this information with the Activity sheet, 'Plan a story', to plan a story set in Australia in the 1900s. The Activity sheet, 'Tall tales', provides information about creative writing and guides students through the process of writing the introduction to their creative short story.

Extension ideas

Have students use <http://trove.nla.gov.au> to research Australian newspapers from around 1900. You can alter the dates in the advanced search option or by choosing the decade option on the side once you have started to search. (Search using 'Available online' and 'Australian content' to find relevant information).

Ask students to complete one of the following activities.

- Find an advertisement in a newspaper from around 1900. What items are being sold? Why were these items important or desirable? What persuasive techniques are used to advertise them?
- Choose an issue that is important today, such as drugs, women's rights, immigration, sports or gambling. Find out how this issue was presented around 1900. Is the way people viewed the issue at that time similar or different to how we see the issue today? Explain your answer.
- Choose a nationality or race to research. How were people from that group described in 1900? Is positive or negative language used?

Web addresses were functional at the time of publication but teachers should check them for inappropriate content and to ensure that they are still functional before use with students.

Sanitation and health

Bathrooms were very different for the rich and the poor during the 1900s in Australia.

Rich people	Poor people
Many homes had flushable toilets. Mass production of these began in the 1850s in England.	Most people used outside dunnies as toilets. Nightsoil men would collect the waste at night.
Many had bathrooms with porcelain bath tubs. They could wash regularly.	Some used cesspits as toilets. These were large holes that people used until they were filled.
Most had taps in their houses giving them easy access to water.	Most used tin tubs to wash in and the whole family would share the same water. It was not done often, as it was hard to heat the water and they could not keep it warm.
	Most people didn't have taps in their houses. They used common wells or taps in public areas and carried the water back to their homes.

-  1 List two differences in sanitation between the rich and the poor.

- 2 List one similarity in sanitation between the rich and the poor.

- 3 Write a diary entry for both a rich person and a poor person, discussing your use of bathrooms, toilets and water. Make it interesting and show your knowledge of the time.

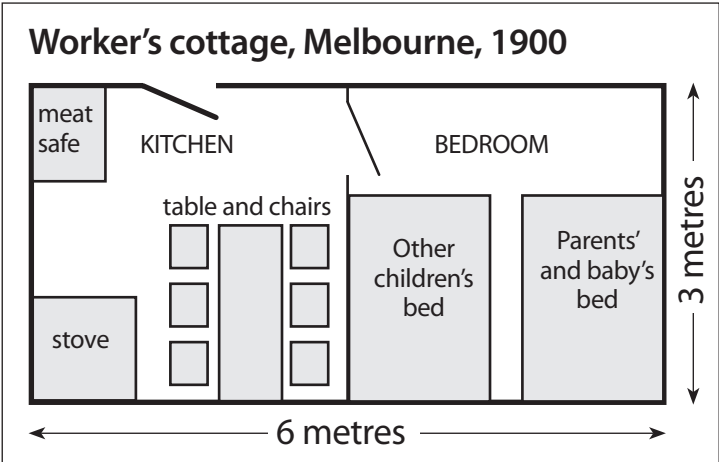

Diary of a rich person	Diary of a poor person

Homes

Houses in the 1900s were very different to houses today. They were often a lot smaller, with simpler technology and far less furniture. Houses built for middle class or wealthy people between 1900 and 1910 were often called Edwardian. They had high sloping roofs and were made of red brick or a pale weatherboard.

In 1900, a worker’s cottage in Melbourne or Sydney cost about five shillings (sixty cents) a week to rent. They had two rooms: a kitchen and a bedroom. The toilet was usually an outside closet.

- 1 Draw and label the plans for your own home. Include the furniture in each room.

- 2 Compare the two plans. Identify:

a one difference _____

b two similarities _____

c three things the worker’s cottage doesn’t have that you couldn’t live without.

Working class men, women and children

The lives of unskilled workers were often hard in Australia in the 1900s. Although there were many changes in technology and lifestyle, the lives of the poorest people were similar to those 100 years earlier.

I never used to work. Then my man got sick and I started working for Mr Taylor at the clothes factory. At first I took cloth home and hemmed it because it was easier with the children. But it didn't pay much and in the end I went to the factory. The hours are long, but we have to eat.

Simone L., 23 years

They call Australia a working man's paradise. Maybe it used to be before but not now in 1900. I live near my factory. There are only a few trams and buses so I usually walk. Sometimes I think of moving to the country where the air is clear and a man could be himself.

James T., 38 years

Reuben J., 28 years

The roads are often covered in sewage. I have to be careful where I step so I don't get covered in the muck. Nobody wants to buy things from someone who smells like the streets.

Shelby L., 14 years

My mother sends me to school. She wants me to learn well and become a teacher. The money for teaching is better than other jobs. And if I get to be a governess, I might meet a rich man to marry.

Maddie M., 13 years

My friend Maddie still goes to school, but I didn't see the point. I started working in a factory a year ago, even though you aren't supposed to until you are fifteen. If a truant officer turns up, we lie and say we are older. I got made an apprentice at first and I earned nothing for the first six months.

Plan a story

-  Use the information from the Resource sheet, 'Working class men, women and children', to help you come up with ideas for a story set in Australia in the 1900s.

Structure of a story

- Introduction: introduce the people, location and time; hint at a problem to come.
- Complication: expand on the problem that needs to be solved.
- Resolution: have your characters solve the problem.

Character's name:

Illustrate me, annotating key features of my appearance and personality

Location:

Where does my story happen?

Time:

When does my story happen? What is happening then?

Relationships:

Who else is in my story?
How do I feel about them?

Problem:

What is stopping me from doing what I want?

Tall tales

-  1 Use your plan from the Activity sheet, ‘Plan a story’, and the information from the Resource sheet, ‘Working class men, women and children’, to write the introduction to your story.

DEAD writing is alive!

Term	Definition	Use
D - Description	Describe the people, place and events. Use adjectives and adverbs to create a visual scene.	Descriptive scene: The creaking door swung heavily in the wind before crashing into its frame.
E - Emotion	Show and tell the emotions and thoughts of the characters. Make the reader care about the characters and what happens to them.	Show emotion: James wept. Tell emotion: James was sad. Both identify sadness, but showing can be more powerful.
A - Action	Explore scenes where exciting things happen so we want to keep turning the page; for example, fights, arguments and chases.	Fast-paced scenes: Sarah looked behind her to see the police rounding the corner. Soon they would catch up ...
D - Dialogue	Have your characters talk to one another, both directly and indirectly.	Direct: ‘I want cake,’ Noah said. Indirect: Noah told Hanson that he wanted cake.

- 2 Write the rest of your story in your workbook.

Objectives

- Understand why people wanted Australia to federate as one country
- Learn about the process of Federation in Australia
- Consider a positive outcome of Federation: female suffrage

Prior knowledge

Some understanding of the settlement of Australia may be useful.

Background

When Australia was first settled by the British, it was divided into two colonies: New South Wales and New Holland. The British controlled New South Wales, which also included the modern states of Queensland and Victoria. New Holland was controlled by the Dutch. This area included Western Australia and most of South Australia and Northern Territory. Over time, the two colonies separated into Tasmania (originally Van Diemen's land), Victoria, South Australia (which controlled Northern Territory 1863–1910), Western Australia, New South Wales (which controlled Northern Territory until 1863) and Queensland. Britain controlled them all.

The colonies operated as if they were separate countries. Each government could decide on laws without considering the other colonies. One advantage of this was that each government was free to consider the unique needs of the settlers in their region. One disadvantage was that the laws and practices of one colony could be significantly different to those of all the others. This was a problem particularly in border towns. Large taxes had to be paid for moving produce from one colony to another, even if that was to a town just across the border.

Starter activity

Have the class complete a dictation test to show the students how difficult it was to emigrate to Australia after 1901. These tests are real ones used in the 1930s, but they could be given in any European language.

Test 1: The tiger is sleeker, and so lithe and graceful that he does show to the same appalling advantage as his cousin, the lion, with the roar that shakes the earth. Both are cats, cousins of our amiable purring friend of the hearthrug, but the tiger is king of the family.

Test 2: Ice and snow cover the Poles, which are not further from the sun than we are, but the sun's rays reach them slantwise, and are stopped by such a thickness of air that not enough of them reaches the surface of the earth at the Poles to keep them warm.

Point out to students that the purpose of dictation tests was to restrict non-European immigration.

Resource and Activity sheets

The Resource sheet, 'Colony to country', outlines reasons why people wanted to form a federated country.

On the Activity sheet, 'Reasons for Federation', students match reasons from the Resource sheet, 'Colony to country', to given themes and compare them with the situation today.

The Resource sheet, 'Suffragettes', gives students key information about suffragettes. They will use this information to complete sentences on the Activity sheet, 'Suffering for suffrage'. The answers are: 1 vote, 2 abolish, 3 novel, 4 campaign, 5 Indigenous Australians, 6 petitions, 7 women, Indigenous Australians, 8 Indigenous Australians, Referendum.

The Activity sheet, 'Healthy nation', provides information about sickness and health, and asks students to come up with solutions to protect people from common diseases.

Extension ideas

Ask students to make a chart to explore the two following questions.

Why would it be better if our states and territories were like countries?

For example:

- Ruled by the state government
- All resources could be spent on the local community

Why it would be worse if our states and territories were like countries?

For example:

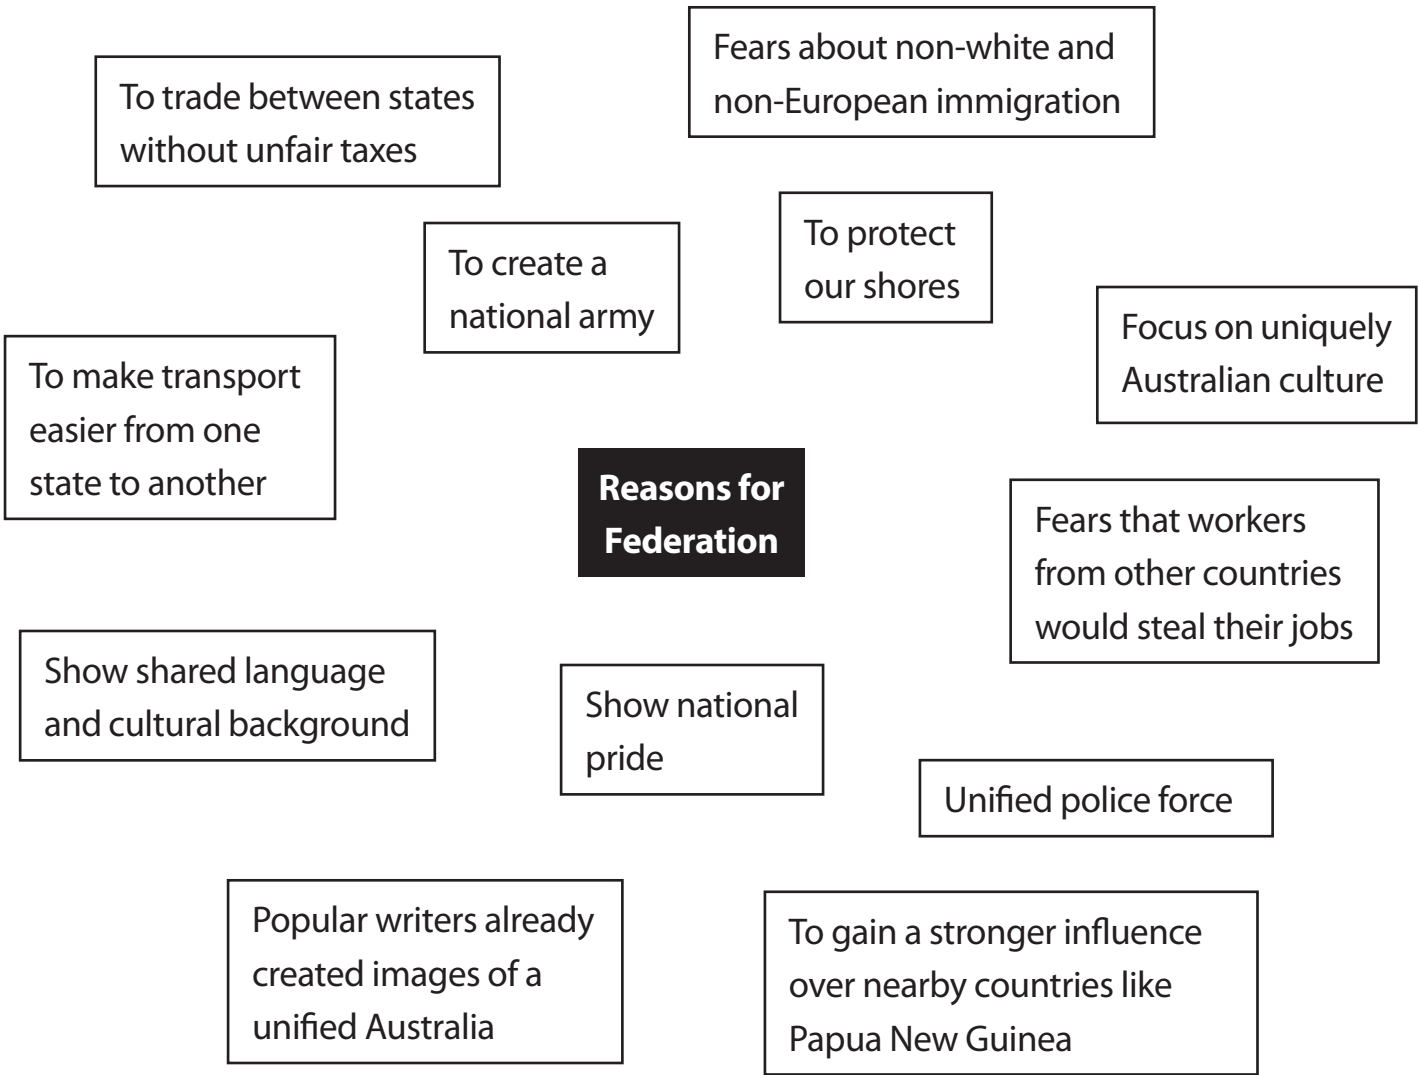

- Specific laws
- Taxes
- Passports to move from one state or territory to another

Explain to students that this is what Australia was like 1788–1900. In 1901, Australia became one federated (united) country and the colonies joined together.

Colony to country

When Australia was claimed by the British, they divided Australia into six separate colonies: Western Australia, South Australia which controlled Northern Territory, New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland and Tasmania.

Colonies like New South Wales and Victoria were right next to each other and yet each had very different laws and taxes. By the late 1800s, many people saw themselves more as Australians than as Victorians or Tasmanians. They wanted the colonies to federate and become one country. In 1901, Australia finally became a Federation.

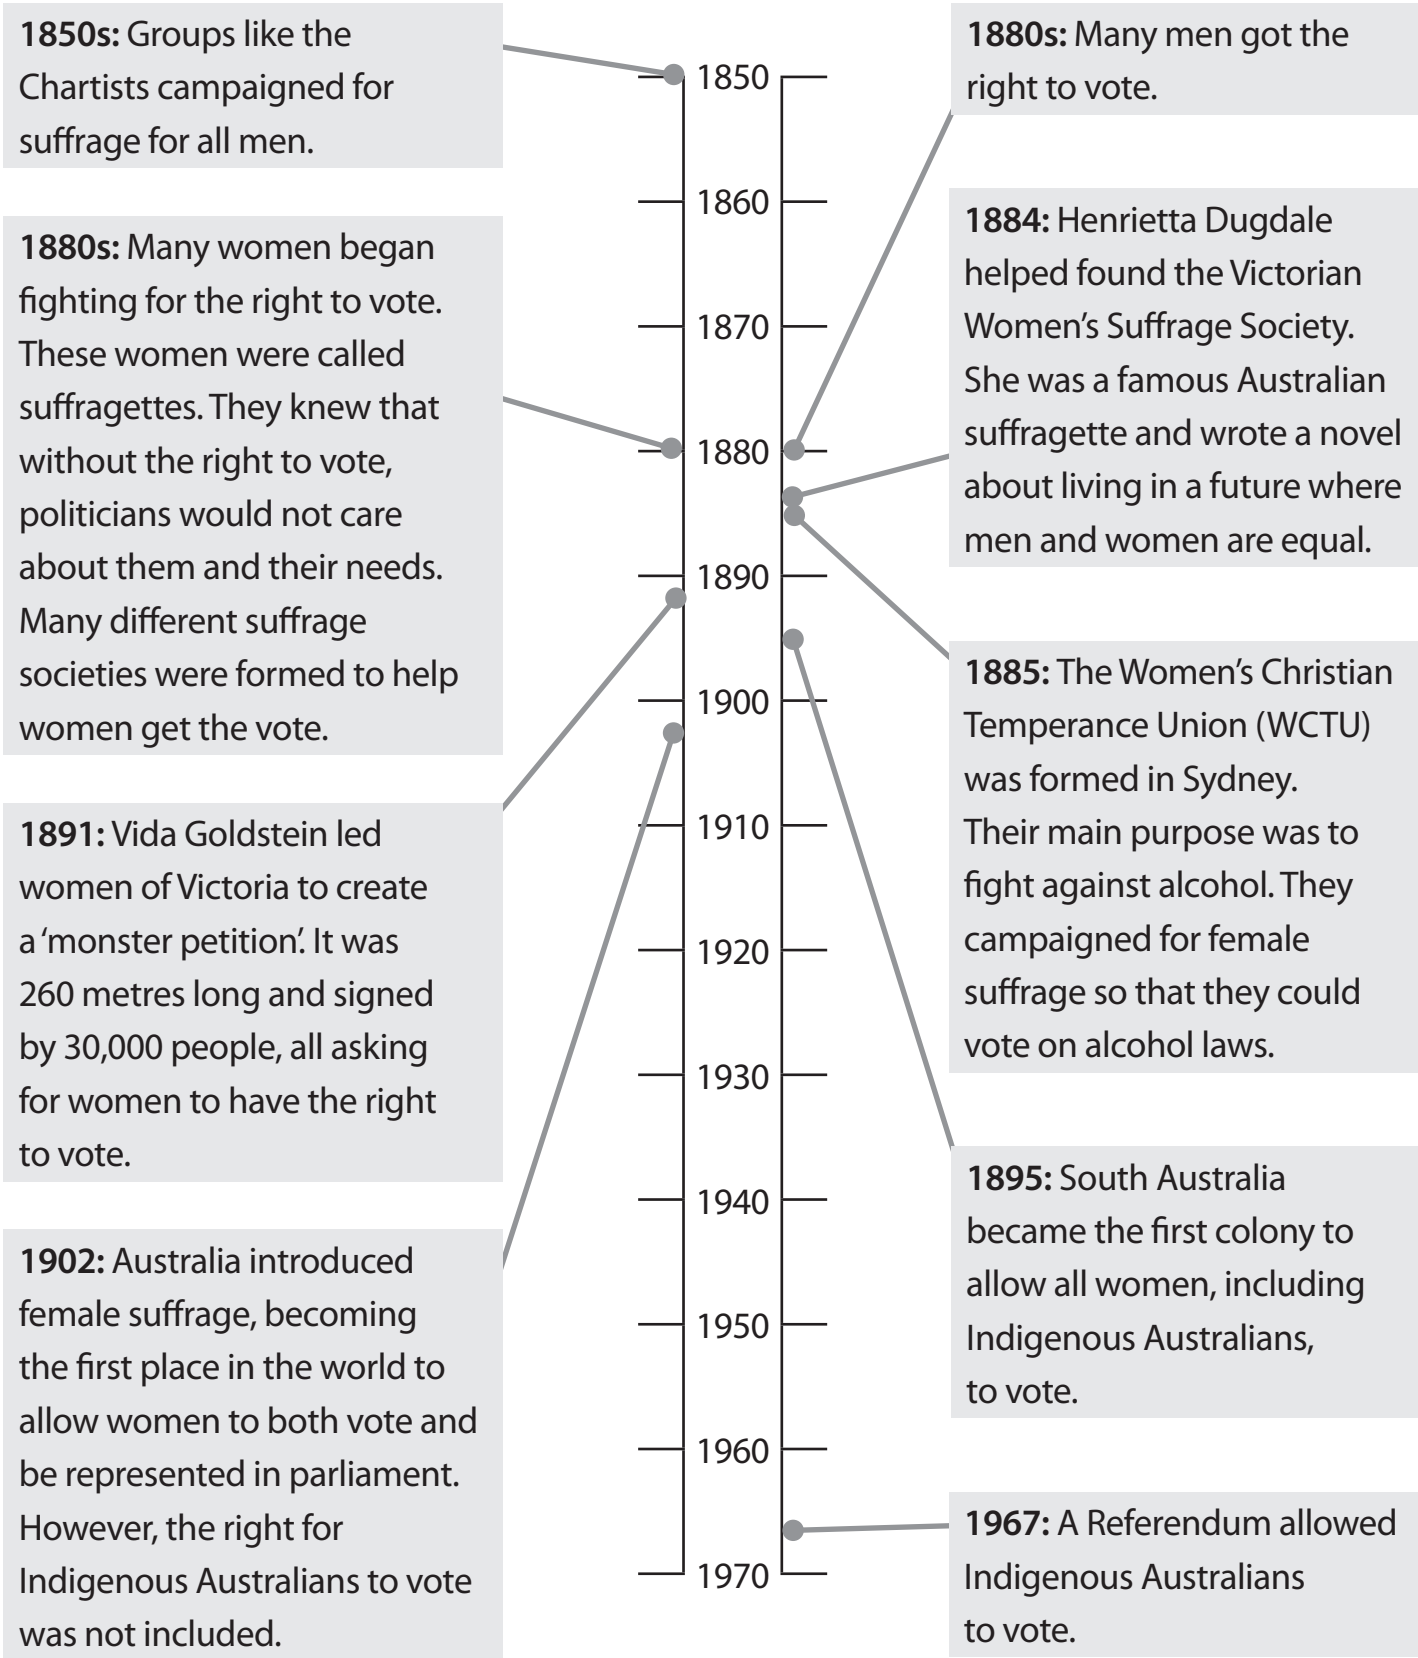

Reasons for Federation

 Use the Resource sheet, 'Colony to country', to help you complete the table.
There can be more than one reason in each box.

Suffragettes

The word suffrage means the right to vote. Before the 19th century, only rich men could vote for political leaders. Slowly, things began to change.

Suffering for suffrage

 Choose from the words in brackets to complete the sentences. Use the information on the Resource sheet, 'Suffragettes', to help you.

1 (vote / marry / become President)

Suffragettes were women who wanted the right to _____.

2 (drink / enforce / abolish)

The Women's Christian Temperance Union (WCTU) were fighting to _____ alcohol usage.

3 (song / novel / essay)

Henrietta Dugdale wrote a _____ to explore the idea of what a future of equality between the sexes could look like.

4 (prohibit / abolish / campaign)

Chartists began to _____ for the right for all men to vote in the 1850s.

5 (Irish people / Indigenous Australians / Innish people)

In 1895, South Australia became one of the first places in the world where both women and _____ could vote.

6 (petitions / emails / videos)

Sometimes the first suffragettes used _____ to help convince men in government that they deserved the right to vote.

7 (Indigenous Australians / men / women / British people / American people)

In 1902, _____ gained the right to vote, but _____ had their right to vote taken away.

8 (Children / Referendum / Plebsicite / Women / Indigenous Australians / Panel meeting) _____ were not given the right to vote until after the 1967 _____.

9 Complete the following activities in your workbook.

- Describe one situation where a group of people is not treated equally. Explain why it happens.
- Suggest a way that the group you described could be treat equally.

Healthy nation

Sickness – 1890s to 1910s

- Poor sanitation or water use made it easy for diseases to spread.
- Many babies died from diseases like cholera and typhus.
- In January 1900, there was an outbreak of the bubonic plague in Sydney. There were 12 other outbreaks between 1900 and 1920.

Health – 1890s to 1910s

Attitudes towards health changed during this time.

- Health experts visited homes to give advice.
- Quarantine standards changed.
- Changes to sanitation meant that fewer children died.
- Doctors studied diseases to find cures.

Australian doctors John Thompson, William Armstrong and Frank Tidswell studied the bubonic plague. They finally concluded that it was the fleas on rats that spread the disease.

-  1 Describe how animals and water caused disease and death during this time.
- _____
 - _____
- 2 List two things doctors did to improve health conditions.
- _____
- 3 Name three common diseases of the time.
- _____
- 4 Imagine you are the Minister for Health in the Australian Government. Choose one health issue and outline how you would solve it.
- _____
- _____
- _____
- 5 Imagine you are the parent of a sick child in 1910. In your workbook, write a paragraph about what your child’s illness is, how your child became sick and how changing attitudes towards health saved your child.

Objectives

- Learn about the changing nature of Australian identity, 1788–1918
- Consider how Australia defined itself
- Evaluate how the Australian identity has often excluded groups such as women and Indigenous Australian peoples

Prior knowledge

A basic understanding of the history of Australia with a focus on the convict period, the early settlement, the gold rush and World War I would be helpful.

Background

Australia has had a relatively short period of time to develop its national identity, especially compared to other national images such as the English John Bull, or national characteristics such as the Germans being hardworking and the French being great lovers.

Of course, the Indigenous settlers of Australia had their own connection to the land as part of The Dreaming. However, given the diverse views, languages and customs of Indigenous Australian peoples, it is hard to determine how national this identity was before the Europeans took over.

Initially, Australia was seen from a Eurocentric perspective. The land was rarely connected to the Indigenous Australian peoples. Instead, it was described in the legal terms terra nullius or 'empty land'. This allowed the British to form their own Australian identity to replace the identity formed by Indigenous Australian peoples.

The British first viewed Australia purely as a convict destination. This gave rise to a national identity shaped by the nature of those transported to the country: everyone was tainted with criminality. As settlement increased and images of Australia began to feature the unique bushland, the national image changed to that of the bushman.

Over time, the national image changed twice more before 1918. First, the 'working man's paradise' was a stark contrast to the working hell of England in the Industrial Revolution. Then the image focused on the Anzac ideals of manly mateship, camaraderie and larrikinism. This fitted the Australia forged on the fields of Gallipoli and the Western Front in World War I. Although powerful, these national images excluded numerous groups, particularly women, Indigenous Australian peoples and multicultural identities.

Starter activity

Ask the students to imagine that the whole country of Australia is a person, then draw a portrait of that person. Have them label their drawing to explain why they chose each feature and how it fits the national identity of Australia.

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'Ideas that shaped Australia', presents the key ideas in the development of the Australian nation. It is paired with the Activity sheet, 'Exploring the ideas that shaped Australia'. Here, students match examples to the key ideas. Then they use at least three of these key ideas in a written description of Australia.

The Resource sheet, 'Australian identity', provides an overview of Australia's changing identity from the 1780s until after 1914.

In the Activity sheet, 'Essay plan', students are guided through the process of writing an essay plan using the information from the Resource sheet, 'Australian identity'. As an extension activity, students are asked to use their plan to write an essay.

Extension ideas

Have students choose one of the identities explored in this unit (a national identity or one of the female identities) and create a piece of artwork to explore that identity. Ask the students to write several paragraphs or annotate a design plan to explain their artistic choices.

Ideas that shaped Australia

 Write the missing vowels (a, e, i, o, u) to complete the information.

Egalitarianism: The beli__f that all pe__ple should be treated eq__ally in society.

Imperialism: The concept that one pow__rful country can rule over an empire of weaker countr__es; for example, Brita__n ruled over many co__untries in the 1800s.

Colonialism: One powerf__l country controls and settles another country, tre__ting it as a distant part of the__r own country; for ex__mple, Australia was a c__lony of Britain.

Multiculturalism: When differ__nt cultures settle in the same area and exist co__peratively.

Racism: The b__lief that some racial gro__ps are better than other rac__al groups.

Nationalism: The beli__f that your own co__untry is better th__n other countries.

Democracy: The concept that p__ople should elect memb__rs of their communities to represent them in gov__rnment.

Unionism: The id__a that workers have r__ghts and should cooperate to impr__ve the situations of all work__rs.

A fair go: The belief that underd__gs and battlers deserve to have the same chanc__ as every__ne else.

Independence: The idea that p__ople are fr__e from outside control and therefore able to make their own cho__ces about how th__y live.

Larrikinism: The ability to joke around and n__t always take everything serio__sly.

Exploring the ideas that shaped Australia

-  1 Use the Activity sheet, 'Ideas that shaped Australia', to help you label each example with the idea being expressed. Choose from: a fair go, colonialism, egalitarianism, imperialism, independence, larrikinism, nationalism, racism and unionism.

White people deserve to be treated better than all others.

Idea: racism

Everyone deserves the chance to go to school and improve themselves.

Idea:

The Roman Empire and the British Empire used force to control and rule other countries.

Idea:

I love my country's flag and everything it stands for. My country is the best!

Idea:

It doesn't matter who you are, I treat everyone equally.

Idea:

I believe we should all be able to choose how and where we want to live.

Idea:

Mick Dundee from 'Crocodile Dundee' is a funny Aussie bloke!

Idea:

I believe in a fair day's pay for a fair day's work.

Idea:

Indonesia was once a Dutch colony.

Idea:

- 2 In your workbook, write a paragraph of at least three sentences to describes Australia. Use at least three of the ideas shown and highlight these keywords.

Australian identity

Reason	Representation	Quote
Identity: Convict, 1780s–1840s
• Convicts sent to Australia during this time • Mostly criminals	• Seen as: – criminals – rebellious, untrustworthy and deceitful • Women seen as prostitutes	"Convicts, whether male or female, evoked widespread revulsion, and we should never imagine that only the well-shod felt horror and fear about them." Miriam Dixon, 1976
Identity: Bushman, 1800s–1880s
• New settlers were often men • Usually took up pastoral claims, farming cows and sheep	• Lone men working in the bush • Taming the wild land • Quiet serenity • The mateship of men as the truest friendship	"many bushmen felt themselves to be, in some sense, the heirs to important parts of Indigenous Australian culture ... in essential bush skills, in tracking ... and so on." Russel Ward, 1958
Identity: Working man's paradise, 1840s–1890s
• Australia took to trade unions before Britain did • First country to have the 8-hour working day • Good wages	• Good lives for workers • Work hard, live well • Good housing and good wages for those willing to work hard	"From the middle of the nineteenth century Australia promoted itself as a 'workingman's paradise'... [with] favourable working conditions." Jackie Hogan, 2008
Identity: Anzac legend, 1914 onwards
• World War I started in 1914 • First serious war Australia was in	• Focus on mateship and fighting for your country • A sense of humour and not always taking everything too seriously	"digger folk tradition of anti-authoritarianism, irreverence, efficiency, resourcefulness and mateship." Graham Seal, 2004

Women, Indigenous Australians and those from non-white countries were often excluded from the Australian national identity, almost as if they were never there at all.

Essay plan

Before you write an essay, you need a plan to help your essay make sense.

 Use the Resource Sheet, 'Australian identity', to complete the plan below.

Essay question: Australia has had many identities.
What were these identities and how did they shape Australia?

1 Highlight the keywords in the essay question. Write synonyms for these words.

2 In the following plan, you will see that some words are underlined. These are the essay keywords (e.g. identities, shape, multitude, Australia) and body paragraph keywords (e.g. convict, bushman, working man’s paradise, Anzac legend) or synonyms for these keywords.

Make sure you use the keywords when you are completing the plan. This shows that you are answering the essay question. Highlight or underline the keywords you write to make it clear to yourself that you are using them.

Introduction

Rewrite the essay question.

(Hint: remove question words like ‘What’ from the essay question to make it a sentence.)

Discuss the topic in general – Australia, although a young country, has had many different identities over its existence since it was colonised by the Europeans.

Use keywords – identities, Australia, multitude, shape

Introduce your four body paragraph topics:

- 1. Convict
- 2. Bushman
- 3. Working man’s paradise
- 4. Anzac legend

Body paragraph 1: Convict

Topic sentence (Introduces your body paragraph) – When Australia was first settled by the Europeans it was seen as a penal colony, which led to the idea of Australia as a convict destination.

What was Australia's identity? Why did it have that identity?

Evidence – We had convicts at the beginning of Australia's history.

Explain – Because Australia started its European settlement as a convict colony. This was how it was seen.

How did that shape how Australia was seen?

Evidence – 'Convicts... evoked widespread revulsion'. Many people 'felt horror and fear about them.' Miriam Dixon

Explain – Australia was seen in the same way as convicts. There was a lot of negativity in the way Australia was seen.

Evidence – Australian women were seen as prostitutes.

Explain – Convict women were often seen as prostitutes or sexually immoral. Over time, all Australian women began to be seen in this negative light.

Mini-conclusion (sums up your body paragraph) – Australia's initial identity was associated with convicts, as they were the first Europeans sent to Australia, shaping the nation as a home for criminals.

Body paragraph 2: Bushman

Topic sentence – The introduction of settlers changed the image of Australia to that of the Bushman.

What was Australia’s identity? Why did it have that identity?

Evidence – Men often worked alone in the bush. There were few settlers at first.

Explain – _____

How did this identity shape how Australia was seen?

Evidence – _____

Explain – The new bushmen (Europeans) replaced the old bushmen (Indigenous Australians). European settlers believed they had new links to the land.

Evidence – working the land, taming the land

Explain – _____

Mini-conclusion (sums up your body paragraph) – _____

Body paragraph 3: Working man’s paradise

Topic sentence – _____

What was Australia’s identity? Why did it have that identity?

Evidence – _____

Explain – _____

How did this identity shape how Australia was seen?

Evidence – _____

Explain – _____

Evidence – _____

Explain – _____

Mini-conclusion (sums up your body paragraph) – _____

Essay plan continued

Body paragraph 4: Anzac legend

Topic sentence – _____

What was Australia’s identity? Why did it have that identity?

Evidence – _____

Explain – _____

How did this identity shape how Australia was seen?

Evidence – _____

Explain – _____

Evidence – _____

Explain – _____

Mini-conclusion (sums up your body paragraph) – _____

Conclusion

Sum up the essay question – _____

Your POV (Hint: This is your point of view or argument, whether you agree or disagree) – _____

Sum up body paragraph 1 – _____

Sum up body paragraph 2 – _____

Sum up body paragraph 3 – _____

Concluding statement (One powerful statement about the topic to finish on)

Extra activity: Write an essay using this plan. There should be six paragraphs: an introduction, four body paragraphs and a conclusion.

Objectives

- Learn about key cultural works in Australia in the 1800s and early 1900s
- Consider the impact of women on the development of Australian literature
- Understand the development of the film industry in Australia

Prior knowledge

No prior knowledge is required.

Background

Australia has a long history of artwork – music, dance, film, photography and acting. The first Indigenous Australian peoples made cave paintings and dot paintings to record their stories, and performed dances and played music to explore their understanding of the world and their connection to it.

The settlement of Australia quickly led to European views of Australia, with many artists choosing to reframe Australia as a 'New England'. Their artworks presented Australia in very English colours and tones. Some of the first settlers used their artistic skills to show the new settlements and even interactions with the Indigenous Australian peoples. At any state or national gallery in Australia, you can see the range of artwork moving from stereotypical English landscapes to a recognition of the wild desert bushland that was perhaps a more accurate representation of the Australia that the early settlers interacted with.

In the late 1800s, a number of writers and poets, such as Henry Lawson, Louisa Lawson, Banjo Paterson, Ethel Turner and Barcroft Henry Boake, helped to construct the Australian identity. Their vivid, descriptive writing contributed to a uniquely Australian identity rather than a colonial identity that was unique to each colony. These constructions of the Australian identity were one aspect of the push towards Federation in 1901 when Australia became one country.

In the 1900s, Australia became a pioneer in the film industry. The Story of the Ned Kelly Gang was the first full-length film ever made. Australia became a powerful film industry player in the early years before Hollywood began dominating the scene. The Australian film industry only began to recover in the 1970s with funding from the federal and state governments.

Starter activity

Have the students create an artwork that represents their understanding of Australia. Discuss the different views revealed in the artworks.

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'Louisa Lawson and The Dawn', introduces a significant Australian woman and her magazine, the first in Australia to be written for and by women.

The Activity sheet, 'Different views', presents an illustration of an Indigenous Australian man. Students are asked to interpret the artist's perspective on his subject before they create their own illustrations.

The Resource sheet, 'The Never Never', has a poem by Barcroft Henry Boake. This is paired with the Activity sheet, 'Deadly desert'. Here, students explore the powerful visual imagery of Boake's poem.

The Activity sheet, 'The Story of the Ned Kelly Gang', looks at the fledgling Australian film industry.

Extension ideas

Have students watch Youtube clips from the 1906 film The Story of the Kelly Gang. Note that only fragments of the film have survived. Then students could:

- recreate one scene and film or perform it
- write a review of the film
- draw storyboards showing the style of filming of one key scene.

Different views

Thomas Bock was a convict who painted Indigenous Australian people in Tasmania. He painted this man in the 1830s.

Thomas Bock, Portrait of Jemmy, 1830s, National Library of Australia, nla.obj-138613574.

Word bank

- gentle / strong
- proud / ashamed
- vibrant / colourless
- male / female
- sophisticated / barbaric
- black / white
- intelligent / stupid
- good / evil
- wise / cunning
- brave / weak
- shy / confident
- cautious / adventurous
- amused / sad / angry
- thoughtful / uncaring

 1 What does the image tell you about the way the artist viewed his subject? Explain your answer. You can use the word bank above to help you.

2 Imagine you are an Indigenous Australian artist in the 1830s. On a separate sheet of paper, draw a portrait of a British settler. Annotate your drawing to explain your choices of colour and content, and how it shows your opinion of the settler.

The Never Never

Barcroft Henry Boake was an Australian bush poet. He wrote many poems in 1890–91 while trying to find a job during the Depression. He died in 1892. His famous poem Where the dead men lie describes the Australian outback. Here is an excerpt from it.

Where the dead men lie

Out on the wastes of the Never Never—
 That's where the dead men lie!
 There where the heat-waves dance for ever—
 That's where the dead men lie!
 That's where the Earth's loved sons are keeping
 Endless tryst: not the west wind sweeping
 Feverish pinions, can wake their sleeping—
 Out where the dead men lie!

Where brown Summer and Death have mated—
 That's where the dead men lie!
 Loving with fiery lust unsated—
 That's where the dead men lie!
 Out where the grinning skulls bleach whitely
 Under the saltbush sparkling brightly;
 Out where the wild dogs chorus nightly—
 That's where the dead men lie!

FA Sleaf (engraver) and J Macfarlane (artist), The stony desert – Sturt's third expedition, 1891, State Library of Victoria, IAN01/01/91/supp/5.

Glossary

bleach: turn white from the sun, over time

heat-waves: when it has been really hot for a long time and the air looks wavy

mated: married

Never Never: outback Australia

pinions: wing feathers of a bird

saltbush: a plant that can live in the desert

tryst: romantic relationship, usually with a boyfriend or girlfriend

unsated: unsatisfied

Deadly desert

Australia's interior has been described as the 'Never Never' – suggesting that this rugged desert landscape is mysterious and unique. Barcroft Henry Boake's poem Where the dead men lie uses metaphors and powerful visual language to describe the Australian desert.

-  Use the Resource sheet, 'The Never Never', and a dictionary to help you illustrate these phrases from Where the dead men lie. Then annotate your drawings to help explain the meanings of the phrases.

Under the saltbush sparkling brightly

sweeping feverish pinions

grinning skulls bleach whitely

That's where the dead men lie!

The Story of the Ned Kelly Gang

Motion picture cameras were invented in the 1890s, and people saw the first moving images.

- The early film industry was open to anyone with enough money to buy a camera.
- The first films were about 12 minutes in length.
- They were shown at theatres, halls and even outside against white sheets.
- The first films had no audio; a musician often played the piano during the film.

 1 Compare films today to those in the 1890s.

- Film length: _____
- Sound: _____
- Location: _____

The 1906 film The Story of the Kelly Gang was one of the first Australian-made films.

- It was about bushranger Ned Kelly, who was hanged in Melbourne 26 years earlier in 1880.
- It was the first film that went for more than an hour, made anywhere in the world.
- People enjoyed stories of outlaws with their connection to the land, air of mystery and thrilling adventures.
- The film was very popular in other countries and was toured throughout Britain.

2 What are bushrangers best known for doing?

3 Why do you think people both now and in the past enjoy films about bushrangers?

4 List two modern films that have a character similar to that of a bushranger. Briefly outline the similarities.

Objectives

- Learn about the Immigration Restriction Act of 1901
- Consider the impact of removing the right of Indigenous Australian people to vote or to be counted in the census

Prior knowledge

A basic knowledge of Federation may be useful.

Background

With Federation in 1901, Australia became one country. Previously it had been a group of colonies existing in the same land, all with vastly differing laws, wages and cultures.

Federation led to positive changes such as female suffrage. Australia was the first country in the world to allow women the right to vote and also to be represented in Parliament. New Zealand became the first country in the world to allow women to vote in 1893.

However, negative changes also resulted from Federation and they were linked firmly to racism. The increase in Chinese immigration during the gold rush and the location of Australia in the south-east Asian region led to racist fears about an Asian invasion of Australia. There was a strong movement towards developing a White Australia. This was to be accomplished by preventing non-European and non-white immigration through the Immigration Restriction Act of 1901. Within the country, Indigenous Australian people were mistreated because of those same racist ideas that made Europeans fear Asian immigration.

The Australian Constitution was formulated in 1900 and came into power in 1901. This document defined the rules and construction of Australian society, and the powers held federally and by the state. In the Constitution, Indigenous Australian people were excluded from the census, implying they did not exist. Their right to vote was also removed.

Starter activity

Lead a class discussion about laws. Ask students to think about some laws today that apply to teenagers. What is their purpose? Do you think they are fair or unfair?

Focus the discussion on the issues of voting, immigration and family life, and in particular, how children's lives are governed.

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, 'Immigration nation', considers how different groups of migrants were treated in Australia. It is paired with the Activity sheet, 'Immigration Restriction Act', which explores the effects of this Act on immigration.

The Activity sheet, 'Indigenous Australian people in 1901', looks at how Indigenous Australians were included or excluded from voting and the census.

Extension ideas

Choose a group that moved to Australia from another country; for example: Chinese, Afghans, Pacific Islanders, Japanese or Irish.

- Research when they came to Australia and create a timeline.
- Why did choose Australia? Think of the advantages of living in Australia.
- Why did they leave their own country? Think of the disadvantages of staying in that country.

Immigration nation

Australia is a nation of immigrants. Most people arrived during the last 250 years, and it is estimated that Indigenous Australian people arrived 40,000–60,000 years ago. However, different migrant groups have been treated differently, often based on their race.

The English treated us badly, as if we were stupid and ignorant. All we wanted was to rule our own country. Many of us moved to Australia for a new life. But even in Australia, we were mistreated. People wouldn't hire us or rent us houses, just because we're Irish.

Kathleen, Irish seamstress, 1780s–1950s

Many of us came for the gold rush. Some wanted to make money and then go home, but others wanted to stay. We worked on the goldfields and made market gardens. Europeans often treated us differently. They attacked us for looking different and thought we were thieves and rapists. Many of us were excited about Federation – we wanted to be involved in this new country of Australia. But the government wanted a White Australia.

Feng, Chinese market gardener, 1850s–1860s

This was our country, but the white people came. They didn't see our land and our stories, our sacred spots and the places of good eating. They saw an empty land. They didn't see us. We were hurt, we were raped, we were beaten, we were killed and our children were stolen.

Binda, Indigenous Elder, 1788–

Some of us came to Australia to work and earn money, others were tricked into getting on boats or even kidnapped. We worked on the sugar plantations for long hours and little pay. Some married Aboriginal women and wanted to stay, but when Australia became one country, the politicians wanted a white Australia. We were good enough to be slaves on their farms, but not good enough to be Australian citizens.

Alohilani, Pacific Islander, 1800s

We came to settle Australia. It was basically an empty land – the Aboriginal people had lived here for years and done nothing with it. Obviously we need to look after them, they are like children. But we know what is best for them. Europeans are after all the superior race.

Myrtle, White settler, 1800s–

In your workbook, list the reasons why each group was treated badly.

Immigration Restriction Act

In 1901, fears about different racial groups led to the Australian Government passing the Immigration Restriction Act. This was one of the first Acts of the new Australian Government.

It meant that people were only allowed to come to Australia if they:

- could write a passage of 50 words dictated in any European language
- could support themselves financially
- didn't suffer from mental illness or infectious disease
- were not prostitutes or criminals.

This policy became known as the White Australia policy. Although it did not mention any racial group in particular, it was mostly used to restrict non-white immigration to Australia.

 1 What do you think about this immigration policy? Include reasons for your answer. You could use the word bank for ideas.

Word bank: discriminate, unfair, equality, racism, white, black, persecute, sexism, reasons, separate, differentiate, decisions, choices

In the 1950s, the Minister for Immigration relaxed the White Australia policy. Japanese war brides and a wider range of refugees from eastern European countries such as Lithuania, Latvia and the Soviet Union were allowed to immigrate. After the Vietnam War in the 1970s, Vietnamese boat people were welcomed into Australia, finally ending the Immigration Restriction Act.

2 Work with a partner. In your workbook, make a list of countries from which people migrate to Australia today. Why do you think these groups come to Australia? Consider ideas about work, persecution, family, war and work skills.

Indigenous Australian people in 1901

Before 1901, the rights of Indigenous Australian people were restricted by the laws of the colony they lived in. This meant that although Indigenous Australian men and women were allowed to vote in South Australia in 1894, the right to vote was denied to those from Queensland in 1885 and West Australians from 1893.

In the late 1890s, people began discussing the idea of making the separate colonies into a single country: Australia. At the same time there was a focus on creating a white Australia. In 1901 when every other man and woman in Australia was given the right to vote, Indigenous Australian people were excluded. Even in states like South Australia where they had been given the vote, it was taken away.

-  1 Highlight the underlined text that would have a positive effect on Indigenous Australian people. Then circle the underlined text that would have a negative effect on Indigenous Australian people.
- 2 Summarise how Indigenous Australians were treated by the law before 1901.

In 1901, the government held a national census to help them gain a better understanding of the population of Australia and the needs of Australians.

The Australian Constitution became law on Federation in 1901. When the constitution was being formed, it was decided that Indigenous Australian people would not be counted in the census. This decision was only repealed in 1967.

Section 127 (now repealed) of the Constitution said:

In reckoning the numbers of people of the Commonwealth, or of a State or other part of the Commonwealth, aboriginal natives shall not be counted.
Australian Constitution, 1901

Definitions

census: An official count of the number of people living in a country, and information about them

constitution: A national document that sets out how a country will be run

- 3 In your workbook, explain why Indigenous Australian people weren't counted in the census in the early 1900s. What does this tell you about how Indigenous Australians were seen?

Objectives

- Learn about the impacts of the Harvester Judgement and Fruit Pickers Case on establishing the minimum wage
- Gain an understanding of the economic situation by creating meal plans
- Consider the introduction of pensions and maternity allowances on the development of Australia

Prior knowledge

A basic understanding of life in the 1900s in Australia will be useful.

Background

In the early 1900s, people changed the way they thought about the regulation of wages. Previously, the money paid to employees was determined entirely by the employer. Wages were set to benefit the employer, not the employed.

As the self-described egalitarian nation, Australia wanted to form a society where all people were equal. However, their understanding of equality regularly excluded women, non-European migrants and Indigenous Australian people. The theory of egalitarianism was a positive image of a welcoming, open country, but the reality was less positive. The image of equality applied to all white men. Unlike Britain, it was to be a classless society – though still, of course, a racist and sexist one.

After Federation in 1901, Australia worked towards establishing a pension to support the care of those over the age of 65 years. This happened in 1908. To be eligible for a pension, people had to have lived in Australia for more than 25 years and be of good character. This meant that the government had some control over the behaviour of those people who wanted the pension. They had to prove their moral worth, which reinforced the notion of Australia as egalitarian but also superior to other countries. Interestingly, the maternity allowance introduced in 1912 had no similar ‘good character’ clause. All mothers, whether of legitimate or illegitimate children, were entitled to claim the five pound bonus. This was probably intended to protect the health and expansion of the future Australian population rather than support unwed mothers.

Starter activity

Use the trove website (<http://trove.nla.gov.au>) to help you identify five items that most people bought in the 1910s and still use today. Find out how much each one cost in 1910. Then use an online supermarket website to find out how much these items cost today.

- How much has the cost of each item changed?
- Why do you think it has changed?
- Which item has changed the most?

Remember: £1 (one pound) = 20s (twelve shillings)
1s (one shilling) = 12d (12 pennies)

Resource and Activity sheets

The Activity sheet, ‘Minimum wage’, identifies two key legal cases that contributed to the minimum wage: the Harvester Judgement and the Fruit Pickers Case. Students will use this Activity sheet to help them complete the Activity sheet, ‘Impact on Australia’. Here, students apply their knowledge to writing speeches that express conflicting points of view.

The Activity sheet, ‘Pensions and maternity allowance’ looks at the introduction of two key forms of economic support for marginalised groups.

The Resource sheet, ‘Food and money’, outlines the costs of living in 1911 and 1915. It accompanies the Activity sheet, ‘Comparing costs’, where students analyse how costs changed over these four years.

Extension ideas

- Ask students to work in pairs or small groups to create a weekly meal plan for a family: wife, husband and three children. Students should use the food listed on the Activity sheet, ‘Food and money’.
Hint: Remember that in the 1910s, food was British in style; for example, meat and three vegetables, roasts, bread and pies.
- Students could then use their meal plans and the prices from the Resource sheet, ‘Food and money’, to make a budget for life in 1915. They should include all food costs and rent, plus matches, wood and kerosene which were used to both light and heat houses. Total weekly spending should be under £3 2s.

Minimum wage

 Answer the questions in the right column in your workbook.

Harvester Judgement In 1907, Justice Higgins was the judge in a case about wages. He had to decide what a fair wage for a worker was. Justice Higgins decided that the minimum wage should be seven shillings (7s) a day for unskilled workers. This was seen as a ‘family wage’ – the money needed to support a husband, wife and two children. His decision in this case helped to create the minimum wage for men in Australia. The case was called the ‘Harvester Judgement’.	1 How did the Harvester Judgement change things for: • unskilled workers • business owners • women? 2 If the minimum wage is 7s each day, how much would a man get paid in one week: • in pounds • in shillings • in pence? Hint: £1 (pound) = 20s (shillings) 1s = 12d (pence)
Fruit Pickers Case The minimum wage of the Harvester Judgement only applied to men. But women worked as well, even though many people thought that they should not. Women were often paid as little as their employer could get away with. Justice Higgins decided that women did not need a family wage as women should not be supporting a family. All families should have a man working to support them. Women were paid about half of the male wage.	3 Why did Justice Higgins think that women didn’t deserve to be paid the same amount as men, even if they did the same job? 4 Do you think his reasons are fair? Explain.
Different states, different wages Female weekly wages in 1915 • South Australia £1 4s • Western Australia £1 17s Male weekly wages in 1915 • Tasmania £2 12s • Western Australia £3 2s	5 Why do you think different states had different wages? 6 Look at the female wage and male wage for Western Australia. How many more shillings each week do men receive?

Food and money

In the early 1900s, the minimum weekly wage for men was between £2 12s and £3 2s, depending on the state they lived in. Women were paid less and usually stopped working when they got married.

This wage was good in 1901 but bought less in 1915.

The Weekly Times said:
“eighteen months ago the woman endeavouring to rear a small family on £3 a week found it difficult to make ends meet; now she realises that it is impossible.”

Achieve! Instant Lessons

Quality ready-to-use resources

Each book in the Achieve! series has been designed and written for secondary students who have low-level literacy skills and require modified classroom activities to fully participate in the curriculum. Students will experience success as they work alongside their classmates in the same subjects with material that is tailored for their literacy needs.

Key features

- ✓ Mature-look page layout and illustrations
- ✓ Topics that will interest teenagers
- ✓ An emphasis on literacy skills
- ✓ Clear learning objectives
- ✓ Starter activities, background information and ideas for summarising a lesson

The work sheets in this series are ideal for group or individual study and are easy for classroom helpers to implement in one-on-one lessons. You can also use the photocopiable pages for revision, assessment and home study.

Achieve! History Making a nation – Australia 1750–1918

While very suitable for the regular classroom, the Achieve! series of History titles has been written at a literacy level that is appropriate for secondary school students who, because of poor reading skills, may struggle with regular classroom materials.

This title explores the experiences of Indigenous Australians and European colonists since the late 1700s. Topics such as the impact of European colonisation on Indigenous Australian people and their rights at the time of Federation in 1901 are explored. Major moments in the nation's development are included such as the Eureka Rebellion, Federation and times of increased non-European migration. Students are also provided with a scaffolded activity that will assist them to prepare an essay about the Australian identity.

The CD-ROM contains all the pages that are featured in the book, as well as a file of illustrations that can be used in other work sheets. These files can be easily edited to suit the needs of students.

Topics include

Land
Indigenous Australian peoples
The goldfields
Non-European immigration
Life in 1900

Federation
Australian identity
Cultural expression
Laws
Money
